2.2 IDE

Our recommended IDE for documentation purposes is RStudio. You must install R, RStudio at least to make it work. For PDF outputs, you need to add a pdf compiler (recommended: tinytex, a lightweight tex compiler.) If you want to run Python code within RStudio, you need to have Python installed on your computer, too.

2.3 Simple Introduction

This part is intended for collaborators who do not write regularly code, and do not use markdown, LaTeX in their work.

3 Data Curation

We are constantly looking for new data sources that may be interesting to our partners or for our own R&D activities.

4 Data Acquisition

Whatever is the source of the data we use it, we never trust it fully. We need check its strength and weaknesses, and bring it to a complete, documented and tidy form.
